Maniac (1980) [88 min.]

Directed by William Lustig

I warned you not to go out tonight! A psychotic New Yorker goes on the prowl for victims in one of the most notorious grindhouse nightmares to ever hit 42nd Street. Legendary character actor Joe Spinell memorably stars as the mannequin-obsessed madman stalking the sleaze-filled streets, also featuring fan favorite Caroline Munro and impressive gore effects from Tom Savini in director William Lustig's brutally unforgettable exploitation classic.

The Faculty (1998) [104 min.]

Directed by Robert Rodriguez

These students are about to discover their teachers really are from another planet. Scream screenwriter Kevin Williamson teams up with director Robert Rodriguez to launch a boisterous blast of body snatching scares with their rollercoaster thrill ride of teenage trouble, sci-fi shocks, and smile-widening, eyes-bulging pure entertainment fun. When the students of Herrington High start to notice the faculty are acting strange, a disparate band of the student body will have to unite to save the day.

House (1977) [88 min.]

Directed by Nobuhiko Ōbayashi

When a group of schoolgirls head to a creaky country home, they quickly encounter more than they (or the viewer) could have ever expected. Director Nobuhiko Ōbayashi's psychedelic freak-out is a brain-bursting blast of hallucinatory haunts & ghoulish guffaws, a madhouse mashup of grinning kitty cats, vibrant visuals, flesh-hungry pianos & severed supernatural heads colliding together to create a dreamlike film fantasy of unbridled insanity that's unlike anything you have ever experienced before.
